THE LAST RITES.

All that Was Mortal of Col. George Noble Consigned to the Grave with Imposing Ceremony.

Renowned Railroad Men and Humble Employees Came from All Directions to Honor His Memory.

Eloquent Funeral Oration of Bishop Garrett—Address of Rev. Dr. Marshall—Services at the Church.

IMPOSING CEREMONIES.

DALLAS, TEX., Dec. 7.—The funeral of George Noble, late general manager of the Texas & Pacific railroad, occurred here today. The obsequies are pronounced the most imposing and the attendance the largest ever known in Texas. The business of the road was suspended as far as was possible, and special trains were run from various points along the line, and hundreds of employees of the Texas & Pacific system came from the principal stations. Among the more prominent of the railroad men in attendance were Gen. G. M. Dodge of New York, President Fordyce of the St. Louis, Arkansas & Texas, W. H. Newman, general traffic manager of the Missouri Pacific and the Texas & Pacific systems, and other officials of various roads in Texas.

The funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian church. The employees of the Texas & Pacific system from Indian and other points met at the Mercantile exchange and marched to the church in a body. The banks and leading business houses closed and their proprietors and attaches generally attended. The pall-bearers were John C. Brown, W. H. Newman, W. H. Abrams, D. E. Groover, L. L. Dempsey, L. S. Thorne, L. P. Alexander and John Kerr. Handrails of the casket were held by the Rev. Dr. Marshall, W. H. Newman, J. W. Harrod, D. W. Lloyd of Marshall, Volney Hall of Marshall, W. W. Harrod of Marshall, J. Swanson of Houston, L. B. Fish of St. Louis, R. W. Thompson of Marshall, G. A. Quinlan of Houston, J. Peter Smith and C. J. Frost of Galveston, J. H. Phillips of Galveston, J. L. A. Thomas, Southwestern passenger agent of the Bee line, J. R. Merrifield of the Ohio & Mississippi, T. H. Thorpe of the Vandallia.

B. W. McCullough, general passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific and Texas & Pacific systems, was the principal director of the obsequies and arranged and managed the sorrowful details of the occasion faultlessly. He received able assistance from his chief clerk, M. Price, in this connection. Among the old Texas & Pacific employees who attended the funeral were Joe Sterling, John Morris, George Vandenberg, Joe Scully, Tom Newman, Jules Alvord, W. R. Bell, Alf Bailey, John Hodges, Wm. Baker, Wm. Kellings. Among the old-time engineers were Ebb Smith, Hank Wilder, John Baker, John R. Quest, John Garabrant, Trainmaster J. L. Griffin, of the Transcontinental division, Texas, Kansas and Colorado, and many others. The old-timers who served on the Texas & Pacific under Col. Noble's former administration, but whose names could not be obtained, J. C. Mow, agent at Jefferson, who was badly crippled in the company's service, and who has been aged at Shreveport, Texas, and other places, was also in attendance.

The body lay in a magnificent casket, around which were wreaths of flowers of the rarest kinds. The church was suitably draped. The railroad men in the city, numbering nearly 2000, passed by the casket and took a last look at the features of their friend. He looked as if he had fallen into a peaceful sleep. The funeral services began nearly on time, and when the first prayer was said the church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Rev. Dr. Marshall conducted the services.

DR. MARSHALL'S ADDRESS.
A crowd of thoughts press upon my mind that I have no words to utter. Had I believed that this event was the result of a blind and inexorable fate, would sit down in silence and in sorrow. Believing that it is not the result of chance or of a blind or inexorable fate but that it is the disposal of an all-wise and infinitely-wise Providence, I thought for a few moments to utter a few reflections. As I passed along the line I saw every depot, every engine, and every car draped with deep mourning, and as every friend that I met laid sadness upon his countenance, it struck me certainly, that is no ordinary death; this is a man that has passed away that has left some bow or other, a deep impression upon the public mind. Everywhere he was known and loved, and every man who lived the longest, and the impression is the deepest, and probably it is not improper for us to inquire why it is so, why he has left this deep sadness upon the community in which he mingled. I know it is not in our community only, but in other communities where he has moved, he has left the same impression. I have seen him pass through the different stages of his life, I have been with him when the sad hour of affliction was upon him, and when his soul was being bled beneath sad bereavements of God. I have seen him as he mingled in the fierce combat of Texas, and many who were the partners of men were aroused, I have sat with him at the altar and have heard his religious experience. I have not time to mark the emotions that crowd upon my mind to-day, but probably it might not be improper to trace some of his traits of character. I do not mean here to-day to make a long eulogy or to praise Col. Noble—it is for another time and place than to-day. I only stand here to glance at a few reminiscences that may be useful for us on the present occasion. To have accomplished the good that he did, and to have left the impression upon his associates, there must have been some peculiar traits of character to enable him to leave this impression. He was a man of wonderful goodness of heart, and when you bid him farewell and lay him in his last resting place there stope in the suburbs of no better man than Col. Noble. The goodness of his heart, the purity of his conscience and his accomplishments attracted people to him, and this was one of the elements of his greatness. It was because he was influenced by the desire to do men good whenever he was associated with them. I never saw him grieve so sadly as when he was compelled to the discharge of his duty to refuse a request and he did it reluctantly, and yet he was firm as a rock in the discharge of the duty imposed upon him. The goodness of heart was one of the elements of his character. Now I follow him up to the society in which he mingled, and as a citizen there was no better man. Anything that would minister to the public good and public welfare found a ready response in his heart. Of public enterprise everything that would promote common welfare found a friend and supporter, and in this respect he was benevolent to a fault. He was a leader in attempting to consummate the designs for the public welfare, but everywhere he was hindered, in public benevolence, in his efforts to give aid to signs you might suppose that a man of such character and such kindness of heart, constantly ready to do the public good, would leave an impression upon the public mind, and so he has. And then, were we to follow him to that sacred association where we were barely to look upon him, in the discharge of those duties in the family circle, he was certainly an example. He was a most devoted and affectionate father, kind and loving husband. We pass from the public circles and gaze upon him in the domestic circle. How frequently he has lamented that he could give him the living prevented him from the discharge of his religious duties, how frequently he lamented that life prevented him from the constant attendance on worship. He was never ashamed to take his stand. He stood upon the Lord's side. He was constant, I know, in the sanctuary whenever his public duties did not prevent him, to transact any business on that day, but if you will wait until Monday morning, I will give you a reply. The committee would not and reported to those by whom they were sent, and returned and told him they would wait until Monday, but not later. The excited multitude from the world to a better world on that day, and not were engaged in their duties, and when I saw Col. Noble enter the hall, I waited anxiously for the decision, and soon after I heard a shout go up. I knew it was a shout of joy, and as I looked toward the door I saw a crowd rush from the building throwing their hats in the air, exclaiming and shouting for George Noble. He came from the scene of excitement and sat in the sanctuary as composed as I ever saw him, and attended to his religious duties, and from what I know of his religious character I have no doubt he has passed from the trials, the excitement and the duties of this world to a better world on high. And now, as I must not delay, and as I must draw this service to a close, methinks there comes up from this lifeless form as it lays there probably an interrogatory to this congregation, then comes up the important question found in the fourth chapter of the Second Kings, "What will you do?" On, to answer that question which can only be answered by the record of a life faithfully discharged. And now as I have run so briefly over some of these thoughts I may remark in conclusion that we are comforted by one promise of God's word, "All things shall work together for the good of them that love God, who are called according to His purpose." Of good purpose and destiny in his work. "Taken rough marble from the quarry, every stroke of the hammer and every cut of the chisel are intended to bring it out a beautiful figure like a thing of life. If we could see the marble with the intelligence and forethought it would rejoice at every stroke of the hammer, and every knock of the chisel that would bring it nearer to perfection until at last it stands out a beautiful form. And now, in conclusion, I can perform for these weeping friends no better service than praying for him, which I do sincerely. The friends who are gathered in the fifth chapter and tenth verse of First Peter: "But the God of all grace who hath called us into His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile make you perfect, establish, strengthen and settle you."

DR. SMITH'S PRAYER.
Rev. Andrew P. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, then delivered the following prayer: "Our God and Heavenly Father, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, be Thy great glory and Thy name. Let Thy thoughts towards us always be thoughts of kindness, love and mercy. But all Thy blessings in this life are blessings that have before them a divine purpose, and the working out of this purpose brings to us a far more exalted and eternal reward of glory. We approach Thee to-day with hearts full of sympathy, eyes moistened with tears for hearts breaking in this great affliction and ask a Father's richest blessing on them. We desire to bring them before Thee in the arms of our love and faith and ask that this affliction, this bereavement, this sorrow be sanctified and blessed, so that all things may work together for their good. Bestow, we pray Thee, upon the crushed heart of the mother the consolations of Thy grace, help her in this day of her great bereavement to recognize Thy wise, Thy merciful, Thy loving, Thy kind, Thy fatherly and Thy Lord's great care, blessed be the name of the Lord." Give her the spirit of childlike resignation that she may say: "Father, not my will, but Thine be done;" to feel that all things shall work together for the good of them that serve God and to them that are called according to His purpose. Be folded in the arms of Thy love those sons and daughters who are now fatherless; help them to look to Thee. May they have the blessings of their heavenly Father. May they have the love of the Lord Jesus Christ, their elder brother, and may they be comforted, encouraged, tried, His sanctified love to their hearts in "all the walks of life. Smooth their pathways for them, fill up the valleys, level the hills, raise up friends for them according to their necessities and hear in the heaven prayers that have been offered for their loved ones in death, and answer them along the pathways of life, and may they be prepared, not only for the duties of life, but also for its end and eternal end. Help us to live that when the hour of our departure comes we may meet it with joy, and not with grief, and when we have crossed the sea of life and been tossed by its last billow, when all the sufferings of sorrow and time are over and the storms and winds have been quieted, may we then safely anchor in the haven of eternal rest and join the choirs and companies of the celestial in praising Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

The services at the church over the funeral cortege moved to the cemetery. The remains were placed over the grave, and Rev. Dr. Garrett, bishop of the diocese of North Texas, the Episcopal church, stood at the verge of the grave and delivered a wonderfully beautiful and eloquent funeral oration.

BISHOP GARRETT'S ADDRESS AT THE GRAVE.

It was my privilege to have known our deceased brother for many years. To know him was to love him. His friends ship honored those who were allowed to share it. He was a brave defender of good government, yet always with respectful regard for the rights of others. To his superiors in office he was loyal and to his equals generous and courteous, to his subordinates kind and kind. While a master of minute details in matters of business, he grasped with the mind of a statesman measures of wide policy. He was the friend of all Texas. He loved her climate, he loved her soil, he was among the first to perceive her grand possibilities and to execute measures by which their realization became practicable. His mind was early aware of her vast latent resources and his best years were given to perfecting agencies for their development. But why speak of these things with my stammering tongue, the growing glory of Texas owes to his vision and their prosperity largely to his genius. We weave the chaplet of laurel we lay upon his brow; the happy families all along the line helped to comfort by his toll place their spirit of evergreen within his sphere; the laborers, who loved to serve with him, his gentle hand, kind with the heart of the laborer, and his kind heart, this is the homage which virtue can alone attain, and is rendered only to the good. Within the private circle of his family we must not venture now, even with unsullied feet, yet we cannot but feel how precious is the hope of the resurrection, the hope of life as we stand by the remains of our beloved. Death is no more of a mystery than life. We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. As birth introduces us into the world of toil, so death leads to the higher world of Divine life. He is not dead, asleep, nor lost to the glory of the everlasting day. He is rounded, requirements of God's law, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" No man ever accused him of an injustice to the value of a hair, none was ever weak who did not expect to see his money before him, none was ever rounded, requirements of God's law, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" No man ever accused him of an injustice to the value of a hair, none was ever weak who did not expect to see his money before him, none was ever rounded, requirements of God's law, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?"
